The backpropagation algorithm is essential for training neural networks. It adjusts weights based on the error rate from the output.